The supervisory board has already approved the annual financial statements and consolidated financial statements presented by the executive board at its meeting on 13 May 2019; the annual financial statements have therefore been adopted. In accordance with the statutory provisions, no resolution will be passed on this agenda item.

LETTER TO SHAREHOLDERS

Dear Shareholders,

In the last quarter of 2018, global demand for oil exceeded 100 million barrels a day for the first time. In Europe, the latest provisional figures for 2017 show that, far from falling, greenhouse gas emissions in the transport sector have again risen for the fourth consecutive year – by as much as almost 30% compared with 1990. In Germany, among other countries, schoolchildren are taking to the streets in support of more environmental protection and a better future. Consequently, the German government is planning to reduce transport-related greenhouse gas emissions from the current figure of 170 million tonnes to 145 million tonnes by 2021, i. e., within 2 years. How does this fit together? What does it mean for CropEnergies?

We are observing a disintegration of social perception. On the one hand, politics and society are striving to achieve ambitious environmental and climate policy objectives. For example, the federal government wants to lower greenhouse gases by at least 55% by 2030. On the other hand, concrete ways of achieving this are lacking. In terms of the transport sector, less traffic also means, of course, fewer emissions, but our developed society also defines itself through mobility: driving to work or a place of training, on holiday or to the supermarket is part of our lifestyle. E-mobility could become a climate-friendly alternative in urban transport in the future. In reality, however, the electric car represents a structural change. It requires increased production of renewable electricity, the necessary infrastructure for cable lines and charging points as well as the acquisition of expensive electric cars. This structural change is bound not to happen overnight. The question whether car drivers can protect the environment using a different fuel can, however, already be answered today: yes, they can. Alternative fuels such as sustainably produced ethanol from renewable raw materials are already improving the greenhouse gas balance and also significantly lowering particulate and nitrogen oxide emissions. The fact that the fuel filler cap on all new vehicles now refers to their compatibility with Super E10 is to be welcomed. A number of manufacturers are already authorizing the use of petrol blends with an ethanol content of 20 vol.-%. If used across Europe, Super E20 would save as much greenhouse gas as 43 million electric cars. CropEnergies is the largest European producer of sustainably produced ethanol, which we regard as the fuel of the future.

By adopting the "Renewable Energies Directive" in December 2018, the EU has set targets for renewable energy in the transport sector that extend until 2030. They are based on both established, locally and sustainably produced fuels and alternatives still to be developed. This is a step forward. However, these EU targets also need to be implemented in concrete terms in all member states and incentives for creating additional capacities for new forms of renewable energy provided. This, too, will drag on for years.

Looking back on the past 2018/19 financial year, we are forced to note that the prospects for the future have not yet fuelled current demand. This has also been reflected in sharp and short-term fluctuations in ethanol prices, which CropEnergies countered with capacity adjustments. The decline in operating profit to € 33 (72) million reflects this market situation. The cash flow of € 59 (90) million nevertheless enables us to further develop CropEnergies with confidence.

Against this background, the executive board and supervisory board propose that a dividend of € 0.15 (0.25) be distributed.

In the 2019/20 financial year, the markets for alternative fuels in general and ethanol in particular should gain momentum from the tightened energy and climate targets of 2020. CropEnergies is very well equipped for the upcoming growth. We will also be able to react to stronger demand at any time thanks to our employees' high level of competence and commitment. We express our sincere thanks to all of them for their dedication and above-average commitment they have shown once again in the past year.

We offer you, dear shareholders, sincere thanks for your support and your trust in climate-friendly and environmentally sound mobility for which we do not need to wait until the day after tomorrow, but which is already available at filling stations today.

Kind regards,

Joachim Lutz
